

Enhance ambition and enable action on health, migration and displacement in the context of climate change

Wednesday, 20 November 2024, 14:00 – 15:00

Displacement and migration are key determinants of health and well-being and climate change not only amplifies health risks but is also driving population movement.

This event aims to: take stock of progress since COP28 and examine the health impacts faced by climate-affected displaced persons, refugees and migrants; foster integration of health into climate adaptation strategies, with a focus on migration and displacement; reaffirm and strengthen the commitment to collaborate on enhancing data and research for evidence-informed policymaking; and break silos to strengthen partnership for collaborative action.
